About the panel

This panel not only showcases the Italianate mansion that has been adorning the village of Brockport since the mid-1850s, it also highlights the contributions to the village of the Morgan family, who inhabited this house for a century. First welcoming newlyweds Dayton and Susan Morgan as boarders in 1864, the house soon became their family home and was known as the Morgan Homestead until the death in 1964 of their oldest daughter, Sara Morgan Manning. Fulfilling Sara's wish that the house should remain an integral part of the community, a group of dedicated Brockporters formed the Western Monroe Historical Society (WMHS) that now uses the house as its headquarters. From the Morgan family, deeply involved in the economic, religious, and educational aspects of their community, to the WMHS, devoted to educating the public on the Victorian era and to hosting community events, the Morgan-Manning House remains a cherished cultural landmark in the village of Brockport.
