Brockport Community Museum Features College History

A plaque tracing the history of the College at Brockport from 1835 to the present was dedicated on Friday, December 5, in front of Hartwell Hall. The College at Brockport marker is the second installation by the Brockport Community Museum in a series that will eventually highlight a dozen historic sites throughout the village. The sign was designed by Norm Frisch, College at Brockport graphic designer emeritus, who worked for 34 years in the College's Office of Design and Production.

Braving the cold to dedicate the "Museum Without Walls" marker are Norm Frisch, Allan Berry, William Andrews and President Halstead

President John Halstead was joined by William G. Andrews, president of the museum and College at Brockport emeritus professor of political science; and Roxanne Johnston, vice president of advancement to dedicate the historic marker.

"This plaque represents decades College history, But it isn't just the College's history that we honor; it's the long and interconnected relationship between the College and the Village of Brockport that we honor," President Halstead said.

The Brockport Community Museum, founded in 2002, is a not-for-profit corporation with a provisional charter from the NYS Education Department. The Museum's board of directors adopted a "Museum without Walls" concept that includes the placement of interpretive signs, public programs held in various public venues and a web presence dedicated to the expansion of the museum's goals and programs. The Brockport Community Museum dedicated its first interpretative sign in 2006 in front of the A.D. Oliver Middle School in Brockport. Additional village sites are in the planning stages.

The sign is made from a high pressure laminate material that, according to its manufacturers, is impervious to harsh conditions including moisture, UV light, scratching, impact and graffiti.

The College at Brockport panel includes historic photographs, maps and a brief history of the various institutions that have occupied the site since 1835.
